KENSINGTON PLACE

The face of traditional design is changing. Today's approach takes the elegant simplicity of clean lines and then steps back to study the composition of the entire room, balancing the interplay of color, fabric texture and decorative accents. New traditional design is defined by comfortable, inviting spaces that evoke a sense of ease and refinement. The look is less exuberant, less complicated, less overwhelming. It speaks to the attitude of a generation looking to make a very personal statement of style.

Designs in Kensington Place are on-trend and relevant, yet retain classic traditional elements like graceful saber legs, scalloped corners, elegant tailoring and antique mirrored accents. The rich Brentwood finish on Ribbon Stripe Mahogany imparts a distinctive look to the collection, while pieces in burnished brass add sparkle to the room. Plush upholstered seating pulls the look together with a soft palette of colors and remarkable frame designs that offer a fresh new interpretation of traditional style.

Today's homes often feature less bedroom wall space, making nightstand options extremely important. The Lucerne is one of our favorites. Its narrow profile is highlighted by antique mirror with scalloped corners and beautiful pendant hardware. The Trevor nightstand on the opposite page has an tiered top on sweeping supports, offering storage beneath and antique mirror on the top surface.

The flared cap rails on the headboard and footboard of the Bennington bed are trimmed at the ends with decorative hardware finished in burnished brass. The bed is also available as a headboard only.

The Beverly Glen table and Carson dining chairs are a study in the beautiful, flowing lines of non-linear design. Your eye is drawn to the graceful curve of saber legs and the gentle arc of concave chair backs. New traditional design also calls for infusing a bit of drama into the décor. Mirrored surfaces are a designer's touch, reflecting light back into the room along with the color, texture and shapes of items being reflected. The Winslow hall chest makes such a statement, with antique mirror accents and elegant pendant hardware. The Del Mar mirror makes a beautiful pairing with the chest, offering an array of antique mirror panels around the perimeter.
